

The Wall

The most recognised barricades in history- The Great Wall of China, Hadrian's Wall and the Berlin Wall - reflect violent epochs of cultural incompatibility, testifying to man's failure to live in peace with his neighbours.

Incrementally creeping over disputed frontiers, Israel's addition at separation engineering, has instead of holding back "The Barbarians at the Gate," invited the whole world in, weighing in with fear and loathing.

"The motivation to go to The Hague was to show on the streets outside the courthouse that there was a massive Jewish protest against the International Court of Justice's (ICJ) crusade to try Israel for an act of self-defence," says Roy Chweidan of Netanya, who joined over 500 Israelis in an impressive display of solidarity. "There were over 3000 supporters, a fair number of them non-Jews. One of the most impressive groups was Zaka, whose volunteers were easily identifiable by their bright yellow jerseys." Founded in 1995, Zaka is an acronym for Zihui Korbanot Ason, Hebrew for Identification of Disaster Victims. "They are often the first rescue workers to appear at the scene of a terrorist bombing or shooting and the last to leave."

COURTING PUBLIC OPINION

While arguments against Israel were heard on the first day of the hearings by a representative of the South African government, former South African Roy was in the thick of the demonstrations outside the courthouse in the battle for public opinion.

Most prominent, says Roy, "was the burnt out mangled wreckage of Bus no. 19 which had been blown up in a recent suicide attack in Jerusalem, and stood as visual testimony of the tragic necessity of the security barrier to protect Israeli citizens."

Complementing the bus exhibit was the human dimension — "people who had lost loved ones in terror attacks. Almagor, the Organisation of Casualties of Terror Acts, had organized their presence there with banners and photos of the victims. It was heart wrenching seeing a parent having lost five members of her family, a father having lost a son, a mother her daughter, a student his girlfriend.

KANGAROO COURT

Following on the Court’s decision to allow the Arab League to be a party at the hearing, Almagor also made overtures to join in the discussion on the security fence. As an Almagor spokesman remarked, “while we are not overjoyed at the fence, we cannot allow this unbridled hypocrisy and bias to prevail at The Hague.” Alan Dershowitz endeavoured to expose the bias, referring to the ICJ as a kangaroo court because judges had been “Particularly irksome,” said Roy, “was that despite the large turnout of supporters who had come from afar, the local Dutch press focused pictorially in their newspapers on the few Neturei Karta representatives, who were denouncing Israel with their banners. One read “Solution – Peaceful Dismantling of the Zionist State.” These were the same guys who demonstrated at the UN Conference on racism in Durban in 2001.”

Interviewed in Afrikaans on Dutch radio, Roy was asked why he had travelled to The Hague. Holding his banner - Court Hands Off

The Fence - Roy replied, “We are here to protest the illegality of the ICJ to judge Israel in taking defensive steps against terrorism.”

Proponents in Israel argue that Israel needs the barrier to keep out Palestinian attackers intent on causing maximum death and destruction to its civilian population. Palestinians, and many Israelis who support the idea of a fence, charge that this barrier amounts to a land grab, and disrupts the Palestinians’ daily lives as they try to reach jobs, schools and farmland. As the debate rages, so does the intensity of both peoples rage and with each passing day, adds, in the words of Pink Floyd, “Another Brick In The Wall”.•

appointed by countries that were participating in the hearing.”

Roy cites the example of the Egyptian justice at the ICJ, Dr. Nabil Al-Arabi who was reported to have expressed prior to the hearing that “Israel’s arguments will prove to be groundless... and it will be possible to impose sanctions upon it for the first time.”
